The charge sheet against Franklin Graham, the president of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, was dropped after he reached a plea agreement with prosecutors, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Texas said in a press release. Graham was accused of violating federal firearm laws in connection to the Feb. 3, 2017 shooting at the First Baptist Church in Sutherland Springs, Texas, which had about 300 people in attendance. A 26-year-old white male opened fire on the church's congregation of more than 50 people, killing 26 and injuring 20 others. A former Texas Department of Public Safety official, 26-year-old Devin Kelley, fired at the congregation after being pulled over by state troopers in the aftermath of a chase, according to authorities. Kelley later killed himself as officers closed in on him, but investigators said he didn't commit suicide immediately after the shooting. The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Texas, on Friday, said in a news release it was "satisfied that the evidence and legal analysis clearly establishes that defendant Franklin Graham did not violate the federal law governing the possession of firearms." "The case was never about the possession of firearms; it was about an unlawful assault with a deadly weapon on a Bible study class," the release states. "The case was a horrible tragedy, and it remains a great sadness that the lives of so many were affected by it. But after extensive investigation, including countless interviews with survivors and dozens of eye-witnesses, the evidence and legal analysis clearly establish that defendant Franklin Graham did not violate the federal law governing the possession of firearms," U.S. Attorney John Bash said in the statement. Bash, who was appointed by President Donald Trump in November 2018, said in the release that "dealing with today's allegations is a reminder of why we can never be complacent about our work here at the U.S. Attorney's Office," and that there is "no greater responsibility." Graham's attorney, Mike McClure, said in a statement that the 68-year-old evangelical leader 77a5ca646e
